Pamela Jordan

As Head of School for the Chicago Academy for the Arts, I have the opportunity to get to know students from all departments and to see the talent these students develop over the years. Arts Academy students have a thirst for knowledge and a love of learning that is held together by their passion and commitment to the arts.

The class of 2003 will leave home and join the hundreds of Arts Academy graduates across the country who have taken this training to record labels, major galleries, ballet companies, center stage and corporate America.

As the class of 2007 enters their new home, I rejoice in knowing that the Arts Academy will live on.

Head of School Address

The Chicago Academy for the Arts is a place where students enter the door with hopes and dreams and leave with plans and a vision for their future.

It is my honor and privilege to be the gatekeeper for this fine institution and to preserve the integrity of a philosophy that has helped transport its alums to the nation's leading universities and conservatories.

Hats off to you, class of 2003! I promise to care for the ones you're leaving behind so that the legacy can live on.
